Aspiring to be something more than a mere workman, he endeavored to perfect the different arts of clock-work, and succeeded in attaching to common time-pieces, at a small expense, machinery which produced music resembling the chime of bells, and the music of a flute. His attempts to discover the means of effecting a perpetual motion, led him to important discoveries. He contrived, among other things, a pendulum, which, being composed of two metals of unequal dilatibility, remained unaffected by heat or cold. He afterwards made his celebrated writing automaton, which, by means of machinery contained within the figure, was made to move its fingers and hands, and to form handsome letters. His last work was an astronomical clock. He was surprised by death before this was finished.--2. Henri-Louis-Jacquet, son of the preceding, born 1752, at Chaux-de-Fond. From his earliest youth, he was employed in mechanical works. At the age of 22, he went to Paris with some of the products of his labor; among which was an automaton, representing a young female, which played different tunes on the harpsichord, followed the notes in the music book with her eyes and head, and, having finished playing, rose and saluted the company. In Paris, he caused one of the workmen, taught by his father, to make a pair of artificial hands for a young man who was mutilated, by means of which he, was enabled to perform most of the necessary offices for himself. Young...
